

The Tragedy of Hamlet

O a pit of clay for to be made for such a guest is meet.

Ha. There's another, why may not that be the skull of a Lawier?
where be his quiddities now, his quillities, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this mad knave now to knocke him about the sconce with a dirty shovell, and will not tell him of his actions of battery? hum: this fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognisances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt: will vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases and doubles, than the length and bredth of a paire of Indentures? the very conveyances of his land will scarcely lye in this boxe, and must th' inheritor himselfe have no more? ha?

Hora. Not a jot more my Lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. I my Lord, and of calve-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seeke out assurance in that. I will speake to this fellow: Whose grave's this firrah?

Clo. Mine fir, or a pit of clay for to be made.

Ham. I thinke it's thine indeed, for thou lye'st in't.

Clo. You lye out on't fir, and therefore 'tis not yours: for my part I doe not lye in't, yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lye in't, to be in't and say it is thine, 'tis for the dead, not for the quicke, therefore thou lye'st.

Clo. 'Tis a quicke lye fir, 'twill againe from me to you.

Ham. What man doest thou digge it for?

Clo. For no man fir.

Ham. What woman then?

Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't?

Clo. One that was a woman fir, but rest her soule, shee's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is, we must speake by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord Horatio this 3. yeeres I have took note of it, the age is grown so pick'd, that the toe of the pesant comes so neere the heele of the Courtier, he galls his kibe.
How long hast thou been a Grave-maker?

Clo. Of the dayes i'th yeare I came to't that day that our last King Hamlet overcame Fortinbrasse.

Ham.

Prince of Denmarke

Ham. How long is that since?

Clo. Cannot you tell that? every foole can tell that; i very day that young Hamlet was borne, hee that is ma into England.

Ham. I marry, why was he sent into England?

Clo. Why? because a was mad, a shall recover his w or if a doe not 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there, there are men as m

Ham. How came he mad?

Clo. Very strangely they say.

Ham. How strangely?

Clo. Faith een with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

Clo. Why here in Denmarke: I have bin Sexton and boy thirty yeeres.

Ham. How long will a man lye i'th earth ere he rot?

Clo. Faith if a be not rotten before he dye, as wee h pocky coarfes that will scarce hold the laying in, a wi some eight yeere, or nine yeere; a Tanner will last you n

Ham. Why he more than another?

Clo. Why fir his hide is so tan'd with his trade, that a out water a great while, and your water is a fore decay whorson dead body: here's a skull now hath lyen you

Ham. Whose was it?

Clo. A whorson mad fellows it was, whose do you thi

Ham. Nay I know not.

Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue, a pour'd a Rhenish on my head once; this same skull fir, was fir skull the Kings Jester.

Ham. This?

Clo. Een that.

Ha. Alas poor Yoricke, I knew him Horatio, a fellow jest, of most excellent fancy, he hath bore me on his back sand times, and now how abhorred in my imagination gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kist I how oft: where bee your jibes now, your gambles, y your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the
